Corrigendum

In the article “Bruce Chatwin’s Utz (1989): Collections as material autobiographies”, with DOI code number <https://doi.org/10.18309/ranpoll.v54i1.1860>, published in the Revista da Anpoll, 54:e1860 (2023):

In the second paragraph of page 5,

where it was written:

Should read:

In the second paragraph of page 7,

Should read:
